

"I've Been Drafted"

I believe that we are in Iran to defend our investments in oil in the Middle East, we have been fighting nearly the same war in several different countries since desert storm. I believe this war should have ended when President Obama had success with his operation in killing Osama Bin Laden.

→ this is your choice
If I was drafted to war, it wouldn't be my first option in life, but I could accept it if I had no other way out. I would make a list of things to do before I left in case I didn't ever come back. I would go to every foreign country that I could afford to do so. First I could go to Europe and travel through all of the main countries, starting with Ireland, because I have never traveled outside of the United States.

I would consult my mother and father about this decision. My father would probably support this, whereas my mother would be against it because she wouldn't want her only son going to war. My state of mind would also be quite frantic because this would be quite a big decision. I wouldn't really want to go to the army and the only way I would ever enlist myself into the army would be if there was a draft.

Also if I was drafted I wouldn't really care to follow the army rules and regulations because I have no choice but to be there. If you are obligated to be there, I feel as though the rule book should be different and you should have more freedoms than a voluntary army. This is because many people, including myself, would have been drafted by this have never considered joining our nations armed forces; they don't live their lives according to strict army rule and would never join voluntarily.
